The hottest food-and-drink event on The End for Summer 2016, the all-new Dan's ClambakeMTK at Gurney's Montauk, is thrilled that professional surfer Quincy Davis, born and raised in Montauk, will be joining the festivities as the event's first Ambassador of Taste! Quincy comes from a family of surfers, and it was in Montauk where Quincy rode her first wave, fell in love with surfing and, by the age of 12, secured a sponsorship with surf wear manufacturer Volcom. Known for her fast and agile yet graceful style, it didn't take Quincy long to become a standout on the junior tour by winning contests around the globe and claiming 1st place at the Corona Pro from 2012-2015. While Quincy divides her time between traveling for sponsors, media shoots and a select array of surf contests, her sights are set on creative pursuits in the worlds of fashion and beauty...but Quincy will always find time for the waves.

"Along with the New York Subway System, Hamptons Subway is the only underground transit system in the State of New York,"

BY DAN RATTINER

Week of July 14–20, 2016 Riders this past week: 26,512 Rider miles this past week: 165,012

DOWN IN THE TUBE

Jay Z and Beyoncé were seen riding the subway between Hampton Bays and Quogue last Friday. Billy Joel, carrying a motorcycle helmet, was seen on the subway between Sag Harbor and Noyac on Sunday, and environmentalist and businessman Andy Sabin was seen carrying a glass box with a bunch of salamanders in it between Napeague and Montauk on Thursday.

WEATHER TUNNEL RIDE

Hamptons Subway has partnered with a Silicon Valley company called Environmental Bunny Rabbit (EBR) to bring a "back to nature environment" of special interest to subway riders beginning August 1. This environment, actually a weather environment, will take place down in the tunnel that goes for six miles between the East Hampton stop to the Sag Harbor stop. EBR workmen have been down in the tunnel for weeks creating it. For the month of August, subway riders will experience rain, hail, wind, broiling sun, fog, thunderclaps and lightning out the subway windows during the nine-minute trip between those two towns. This weather will come in unpredictable waves during those nine minutes, so you might leave East Hampton in sunshine and arrive and emerge through the end of the tunnel as it pulls into Sag Harbor in a hailstorm. All people taking this trip are advised to bring raincoats, umbrellas and hats with chinstraps just in case things might go awry. Though all this weather is artificially made either by illusion, CGI or hologram, when you get off the trains, things will be normal. However, families of spiders and bats that fight through the weather along the route are real. Beware.

CLINTON, OBAMA, SANDERS AND TRUMP

One of our spotters saw Barak Obama, Bill and Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders in the lead car of a Hamptons Subway talking animatedly with one another as they headed from Georgica to Sagaponack on Tuesday. Donald Trump, apparently unaware of who was in that car.

boarded it at the Sagaponack station but then, seeing the four seated there, did an about face and got off while the sliding doors were still open, and ran down the platform to the next car to board there but the sliding doors shut just before he could do that. He was last seen on the platform, the train pulling away, shouting "the whole system is rigged."

COMMISSIONER ASPINALL'S MESSAGE

As I'm sure you all know from the front page headlines, I will be busy putting together a defense against the Attorney General's bogus charges as we head toward the trial in the fall. As a result, I will be turning this column over to my new Assistant Commissioner Jim Parry, who has performed excellently in this new job I have created for him. He's my son-in-law and a good guy. Don't be too hard on him.

BIG ORANGE MAN

The Hamptons Police received numerous calls on Saturday from terrified residents reporting the appearance of a large, orange-colored man. "The calls started coming in in the afternoon," says Hamptons Police spokesman Larry Hirsch. "We must have gotten at least 40 calls all roughly saying the same thing. A large, orange man was roaming the streets of Southampton.' According to Hirsch, descriptions of the man consistently included references to his shocking orange complexion and frightening orange hair. "After initially being skeptical of the reports, thinking they must have been a group prank, we began taking them seriously when they kept coming in." Police sent out a bulletin alerting all personnel, warning that the orange man could perhaps be an alien life form and should be approached with caution. "You know, NASAs got a spaceship circling Jupiter now, so we weren't ruling anything out," says Hirsch. In the end, police were unable to locate the orange man, and they called off the search at 9 p.m. However, a final sighting was phoned in later that evening, when an alarmed resident claimed to see a "bright orange figure" flying away from the Southampton area in a helicopter.

CONCRETE BEACH

Police were called to Sag Harbor on Saturday morning when pedestrians found it was becoming difficult to navigate the sidewalks because of all the people sunbathing on them. "Apparently the beaches had become too crowded," says Hamptons Police spokesman Larry Hirsch. "Or maybe, what with the traffic, the beaches had become too difficult to get to. For whatever reason, people decided to just lie down on the sidewalks in Sag Harbor and try to soak up the rays right there." Their decision to do so exacerbated an already crowded situation, with pedestrians finding themselves forced to share limited sidewalk space with prone figures in swimsuits. "I felt like I was in Times Square the sidewalks were so congested," one frustrated visitor said. "I was going to give up and walk in the street, but there were cars everywhere." As Hirsch points out, the sidewalk sunbathers put some pedestrians in a quandary. "A lot of the men were in a bind," says Hirsch. "They were trying to look where they were walking so that they wouldn't step on anybody, but they didn't want to look down for fear their wives would think that they were gawking at the scantily clad women lying on the sidewalks. I saw more than one guy getting beaten with a purse. Some poor guys are going to be sleeping with the dog for a while." Police advised the sunbathers that they should find a more appropriate place to catch some rays, and by noon the problem was cleared up. 🙇

The Rich Save Montauk

Billionaires Buy Nightspots and Take the Properties Upscale

BY DAN RATTINER

B eginning two summers ago, it appeared that Montauk might become a big party town with drunken brawlers and all-night parties. The number of loud nightspots was increasing. The number of ill-mannered vacationers looking for a good time was on the upswing. Everyone in these parts—including this writer, who spent his youth in Montauk—was getting upset.

Last summer, the town brought in loads of summer cops to try to keep a lid on things. But it had little effect. As a result, over the winter, the town passed still newer ordinances against party hours and group houses.

It seemed to many that driving the partygoers away might not be in the commercial interest of the town. But the fact is that the Northeast is littered with many towns that descended to these depths and remained so for a while, becoming repositories for trash and garbage. Finally, even the partygoers found a new party town to invade. And so it seemed that Montauk, in the grips of this, would lose either way. They could go with the flow or send 'em packing. Desolation would follow. Was there anything that anybody could do?

As it has turned out this summer, the town has been saved for another day by a totally unexpected group of people. Billionaires. Billionaires and millionaires from the Hamptons and elsewhere, almost all of whom are upscale resort businessmen or Wall Street entrepreneurs who have houses in or near Montauk. Who could have imagined this?

The thing is that Montauk is worth saving. People love it here. People loved it here when the fishermen were ascendant. They loved it as a motel town for families. They loved it as a surfing community. And they loved it—but so did the nightclub people—as a windswept summer place totally away from it all, with fabulous beaches, ranches, sports and hiking.

You can't blame the nightclub people. For half a century, the old resort motel families held sway here. But that was fading. Those who haven't been here for a few years should know that Giordano's was sold, Salivar's was sold, the old Shagwong got sold, Pier One was sold, the Ronjo was sold. The Shepherd's Neck Inn was sold. Ruschmeyer's and Navy Beach and Crow's Nest got sold. Many became restaurants and nightspots with the same familiar names, since the buyers of these places—many well-known nightclub owners from New York—turned some of them into places that became loud 3 o'clock—in-the-morning clubs catering to the noisy patrons they knew from back in the city. But what these nightspot owners did not know was Montauk. They knew only nightspots.

Now billionaires have bought out many of the nightclub owners, renovated the establishments and re-opened them again as upscale restaurants, cafés and well-behaved nightspots that appeal to the wealthy.

Before I get to who these people are, I should like to say to everyone that Montauk is blessed with hundreds of retail establishments. There will remain nightspots for the young. There will remain fishing restaurants. There will remain some of the great motels. There is room for everybody. This is just a shifting of the gears into a new direction that will in the long term benefit the town and keep it safe for the future. Yes, some without the wherewithal will be unable to go to some places. But the John's Drive-In will remain. The miniature golf and boat rental will remain. And I would bet that there will always be a Gosman's Dock the way it was, and even a Salivar's, already surviving under new ownership to (Cont'd on next page) put its best foot forward for the fishermen and their families and friends. I also suspect that "Lunch" on the Napeauge will be serving their famous lobster rolls well into the next generation.

Duryea's Lobster Deck has been bought by Marc Rowan, the billionaire co-founder of Apollo Global Management, the private equity firm. You can still get a lobster roll there, for $34, but you can also get a $95 bottle of champagne. And you will be eating on fine teak tables and chairs rather than the old plastic throw around furniture.

Rowan has also purchased the old Ciao by the Beach, which was often a party by the water well into the night. Food was mostly Italian, spaghetti and meatballs and the like. Now, after a complete renovation, it is Arbor, a restaurant with celebrated Chef Pierre Sudre, who is serving, among other things, a $98 seafood platter. Not incidentally, Rowan has been coming out to a summer home he owns in Southampton for years. He is quite familiar with Montauk.

The owners of a series of upscale restaurants known as The Grey Lady in Aspen, Nantucket and the Lower East Side, are now the new owners of the Harbor Raw Bar and Lounge, a nightclub hangout.

Look what happened to Gurney's Inn. Run-down and skirting bankruptcy, it was sold by the Monte family to George Filopoulos, who has a house in the Hither Hills section of Montauk and is the owner of Metrovest Equities, a longtime property development company based in Manhattan.

Filopoulos and his partner Lloyd Goldman of BLDG Management Co., paid a reported $40 millon for Gurney's, and with an additional $25 million transformed it into a top-of-the-line, world class resort. From the outdoor deck firepit to the breezy food service at the beach to their completely remodeled spa and main dining room—now the restaurant Scarpetta Beach—to its indoor saltwater pool of Olympic proportions, the only one in America, it will find its place with the set that goes to Aspen, St. Barths, Mustique and elsewhere.

Filopoulos and Goldman have also purchased the oceanfront Panoramic View, a 117-unit hotel that had been renting small cliff-front cabins facing the ocean since its founding in the 1930s. They paid $63.9 million for it, and are converting it into 15 duplex and triplex homes between 2,000 and 4,300 square feet in size which sell for $4.7 million to $12 million, each with concierge service and full access to Gurney's Resort and Seawater Spa-which means they can choose different days at four different restaurants at Gurney's before starting around again. The Panoramic is now the Residences at Gurney's Montauk. Altogether the new expanded Gurney's property commands nearly 1,000 feet of beachfront.

Other fishermen's bars have been sold, with the new money coming in to keep them much as they were in the heyday of the fishermen. One is Trail's End, which its new owner, businessman Michael Nasti, purchased for $2.2 million and is changing its name to The Tauk @ Trail's End and moving a bit upscale. Nasti has been vacationing in Montauk for 23 years.

And there is more to come. Gosman's, the 477-seat restaurant and resort center on 14 waterfront acres, is now for sale for $52.5 million.

The new town laws have had their effect. The new rental registry requires a list of all the people who will sleep at a registrant's home every night with a limit to the total based on the number of bedrooms in the house. (Bye-bye, group houses. The architect-designed home of my late parents with its stunning sunset views, was sold to someone who turned it into one for a while.) Bye-bye late night noise. Last month, the nightspot Surf Lodge agreed to lower their maximum occupancy total from 445 to 395. They will also shut down outdoor music at 8 p.m. on the five days a week the town will allow it.

Nobody wants Montauk to be another town on the Jersey Shore. The reality show Summer House, which will purportedly feature young people living at a group house sleeping in numbers far above those allowed in houses in Montauk, was denied a permit to shoot footage on public property in Montauk. Parking has now been banned near the Sloppy Tuna. It's also been banned on Edgemere Street by the Surf Lodge.

Yes, we can all get along. And hooray for the billionaires.

How Robots Will Bring $ and Leisure Time to the Working Man

id you know that Edward Snowden, the man who accessed millions of top-secret messages from our government's computers and let them out for public viewing, is not exactly still holed up in the Ecuadorian Embassy in Moscow?

It's not exactly because his living, breathing body is still holed up there, unable to get out, but his cyberself is elsewhere, wherever he wants. Currently his cyberself, his personal robot, is wheeling itself around America, visiting the Statue of Liberty, the Empire State Building, Yankee Stadium, wherever he wants it to go.

Perhaps you have seen him. You know what he looks like. His live video image is at eye level on a computer screen, held up atop two six-foot poles. At the bottom of the poles are wheels. Snowden controls where they take him by remote.

"Hi," he says. "How ya doin'? It's me."

And it's him, or cyberhim, thanks to the merging of Facetime, Wi-Fi, a robot and a Segway. He can see you and you can see him. He can hear you and you can hear him. So he's out there. But you can't round him up. He'll just turn himself off. And he'll turn himself on again after you've left.

Recently, he watched a movie after getting an award at the Tribeca Film Festival, he looked at the art in the Whitney and he lectured at Columbia University. His whereabouts are being monitored in New York Magazine. So go see him, come up to him and shake his hand. Or whatever.

I was watching a Mets game on TV when a commercial came on. I think it was for Nationwide, but I'm not sure. There's a man at the wheel of a car that is being parked in a parking space. You are in the passenger seat. The car goes back and forth. But the man does not have his hands on the wheel. His head is turned toward the camera and he's talking to you about the insurance he's selling. It's just incidental that the car is parking itself. I say it flunked, because I can't remember the sponsor.

High schools and colleges have high-paying administrative jobs to fill in categories that you've never heard of. For example, you can be a member of the Bias Response Team (BRT). Around the country, more than 100 colleges have such teams, according to a story in The New York Post. Somebody bullies you, you call, and they come. Recently, the Post reported, a student squealed on a journalism professor at the University of Northern Colorado who suggested, while teaching journalism and saying that the class should think about opposing viewpoints, that "transgender is not a real thing." It seems the professor had read an article in The Atlantic that suggested that students today are getting overly sensitive, and wanted them thinking about such things as climate change and transgender issues.

There it was. A bias underway for the BRT. The BRT team visited the professor in his office after class and told him to never talk about transgender issues again or even mention other opinions about it.

Many people in the auto industry believe that car ownership will soon be a thing of the past. Outside, on the roads, electric cars will be slowly taxiing around just waiting for you to call them to come by, pick you up and take you safely wherever you want to go. It's a variation on Uber, but without those pesky drivers.

There are now many places in America, particularly on campuses, in front of sports arenas and in shopping malls, where the surveillance and guarding is done by robots. One is in a shopping center in Palo Alto, another is in San Diego. Designers have found that if the robots are about five foot three, shaped like an egg and appear to have smiles and flashing eyes, they do very well. Except when little kids get at them. Little kids want to talk to them and stroke them and so forth and so on. The robots do talk. But then a kid will kick at one to try to make it say "ow." So it says that, so more kicking ensues. The developers, noting that interacting with children is nice but they've really got a job to do, have trained the robots to scream if it goes on too long—and that sends the kids scattering. So then it gets back to work.

The New York Times wrote about this. They report on a San Diego robot that appeared at work wearing a lipstick kiss on his face. Nobody knew how that happened. Then they report on another, called HitchBOT, that was beheaded at a mall in Philadelphia.

Robots do better if they have "eyes." Without them, people can't project expressions onto them. They're designed to stop moving if cornered. Then whoever cornered it gets bored and leaves. They've designed buddy robots. If one is messed with, the other reports it.

Filmmaker Michael Moore was in the Hamptons last fall to premiere his new documentary, Where to Invade Next. He would go to Italy or Norway or Finland with a big American flag on a pole and then, arriving, stick it in the ground and claim it for America. Then he'd interview some of the residents. In Italy, he interviewed a young couple at a beach resort who were factory workers with time off. They'd get paid for a full year, but every three weeks they had one week off. So here they were in lounge chairs on the Riviera. Isn't that how it's done in America?

Moore visited a jail in Norway where criminals got jailed for what they had done but were free to come and go so long as they came back every night. The food wasn't bad. They had lots of reading material. They played checkers and chess. They were just being kept isolated from their families for the length of their sentences, and that was bad enough. Isn't that how it's done in America?

Moore visited a French grammar school. Lunch for the kids was cheese and baguettes, ham and vegetables, a sweet for afterwards. They had no dietician. They had a chef. The chef showed Moore an entire refrigerator filled with different kinds of cheeses. Isn't that how they do it in America?

It's my contention that as the years go by, more and more of the work that needs to be done will be done by robots. There won't be enough jobs for all the people who want to work. But Americans feel shame without a job. Instead, working part-time, they should cheer about all the time they get off with pay. Work 24-hour weeks with, by government decree, pay for 40. And the rest of the time you do what you want-paint, write a novel, teach children, go on trips. Whatever makes you happy. And just relax about it. Businessmen make more money with robots than with humans. They should share the extra money they make with the employees they relegate to part-time work. What's wrong with that?

I just read that France has a new law, a national law, which makes it a crime to send business email back and forth after 5 p.m. or on weekends. It's another feather in the cap of a group of people who have learned how to live.

There's real good news from outer space. About 10 years ago, the greatest scientists in the world got together and sadly announced they had found where everything went at the end. Everything—and I mean the sun, the moon the stars, gravity, everything—got sucked into a black hole and, from there, simply vanished. They'd found black holes all over the universe. The universe is so filled with stuff that just one black hole isn't enough. This was really depressing. Until I read that, I thought that there was such a thing as eternity. What a downer.

Well, now scientists have gotten together again—Stephen Hawking in his wheelchair is one of them—and they say that there seems to be a way that after you get into a black hole, mathematically anyway, you can wriggle your way out at the bottom. But they are not quite sure just yet.

Wow. What a turnaround. It IS possible that everything will just go on forever. So stick around.

A Mission

Test Pilot Takes Tahoe on a Mission from Southampton to East Hampton

BY ASTRONAUT DAN RATTINER

MISSION "EAGLE HAS LANDED" FRIDAY JULY 8, 2016 SOUTHAMPTON OMNI TO SPRINGS

Arrive 2 p.m. from New York City by Hampton Jitney to starting point at the Omni in Southampton. The vehicle chosen for mission is an eight-year-old black Tahoe with oversized tires, four-wheel drive, several beach stickers and a full tank of gas. It has been chosen because this is the strongest vehicle in the fleet. Full pre-check is attempted. Water level, tire inflation, seat adjustment, mirror adjustment, gas tank full, coffee in cup holder, all windows up, AC turned on, door lock check, brake check, transmission check, moon roof open, cell phone plugged into accessory charge slot. Adele album chosen from accessory, iPhone GPS choice is Apple rather than Google because of unhelpful incident five days earlier in Vermont when Google GPS overshot Montpelier and there was no mechanical lady on the GPS to warn me, so I wound up in White River Junction.

Press location on Apple GPS, type in destination: 27 Three Mile Harbor Road in East Hampton, put iPhone in cup holder so it is visible, facing driver in cup holder. Outside temperature 88°. Full pre-check is complete. Interim stop planned halfway to destination for gas replenish at Speedy's in Wainscott and mental-strength-giving Bloody Mary at Topping Rose House bar in Bridgehampton.

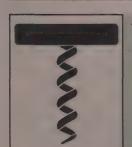

Start engine. Thumbs up to mechanic who steps aside from the front of the car.

"Turn left on County Road 39." Depart Southampton Omni parking lot at 2:02 p.m. making left turn out of parking lot into heavy traffic. Good Samaritan motorist stops and waves me through the westbound lane. Hair-raising experience of turning sharply into the passing lane and then sliding into the eastbound traffic goes successfully and without further incident.

Lady's instruction is to go straight. Pass David White's Lane turnoff, pass car dealerships on the left, medical buildings on the right going eastbound now into heavily backed-up traffic. Look at iPhone GPS. Route is to stay the course, going straight to Montauk Highway and clean shot to Main Street East Hampton, time allotted one hour and five minutes in heavy traffic. Something seems wrong with this. I phone base. They have no explanation.

"Turn left onto Montauk Highway." 2:08 p.m. Negotiate left turn, passing Duck Walk Vineyards at a crawl, then traffic executes a complete stop but reads clear on the GPS. Inform base switching to Google GPS. Execute Google GPS as I reach left turn off Montauk Highway where house exploded last year adjacent to Head of Pond Road. Google route says turn left here and go over the railroad tracks. Time to Three Mile Harbor Road is 38 minutes following the route. Able to execute this with not a second to spare before overshooting it. Route on Google shows clear to Scuttlehole Road. Then it shows long bypass to Sag Harbor, crossing at Jermain Avenue and then down Route 114 to Steven Hands Path. This is the long way around. And it will scrub planned stop at Topping Rose and Speedy's. But this indicates horrors on Montauk Highway. Report this to base who says they will relay this information to Speedy's and Topping Rose. Wish me luck that gas and sanity hold without these oasis stops. Arrival (Cont'd on next page) time in Springs is now expected in 35 minutes.

2:09 p.m. Temperature 87°. Engine light flashing. "Return to route," lady says. "Turn right onto Upper Seven Ponds Road." This runs parallel to the tracks and north of it. Doesn't make sense. Arrive at Deerfield Road and lady says "turn right on Old Mill Road to Montauk Highway." I turn right and am immediately in another traffic jam. Cars completely stopped at where you make a left turn from Old Mill Road to get on Montauk Highway. Make a U-turn. Head back up Old Mill Road to Head of Pond Road again. "Make U-Turn." There is no U-turn. Something is wrong.

What is going on? The lady is out of sync. "Return to starting point," she says. I phone base and tell them. They are working on it. Tell me it is out of sync and ignore it for the moment.

Clear driving up Head of Pond, past the farmstand and Head of Pond Road veers right. Clear sailing through here. "Return to starting point," she says. Call from base. They ask if I have both Apps on at the same time and I tell them I do. I'm told it's the lady on the Apple map GPS talking above the silent Google Map GPS. I should pull over and turn the Apple map off. But I decide to ignore this. I'll tough it out. I'm not pulling over.

2:17: Small backup of 10 cars where Head of Pond turns briefly left onto Deerfield Road and then right to be back again on Head of Pond. I wait my turn to make the left. Fearful moment. Will the southbound car on Deerfield stop? He doesn't. I don't stop and continue into the turn.

2:21: Beautiful farmland. Head of Pond makes slight left onto Scuttlehole Road at the Car Doctor. Small backup here. Pass Atlantic Golf Club. Beautiful golf course. Continuing on. Pass Mitchells, Butter, Lumber, Channing Daughters Vineyard and all is well except for pesky Apple woman shouting directions the wrong way. A deer bounds across the road from south to north on Scuttlehole as I come up on the Bridgehampton-Sag Harbor Turnpike.

2:31: Turn left on Bridgehampton Sag Harbor Turnpike. Heading for Sag Harbor, pass Bay Burger, Estia's Little Kitchen, make a right onto Jermain, pass Mashashimuet Park, zigzag past the Otter Pond then down the rest of Jermain to a second zigzag at the high school then on to Hampton Road (Route 114) where it looks free and clear and so turn right. Route 114 looks free and clear heading the rest of the way south to East Hampton. No problem with this. Base calls to compliment my agility and timing.

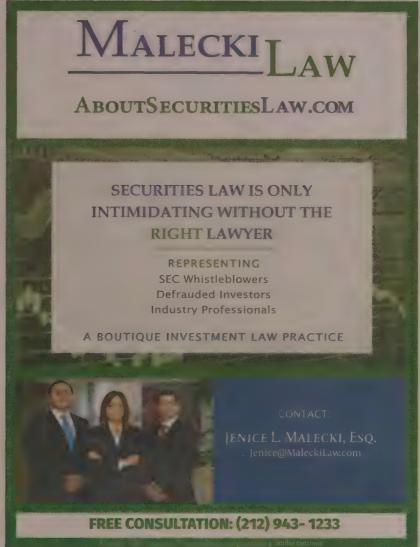

2:40: Pass Swamp Road, continuing south toward Stephen Hands Path cross street with Route 114 when I nearly run into the back of a traffic jam. Near thing. This is shocking to see traffic backed up so far back from that cross street traffic light. Bail out, making U-turn and backtrack to Swamp Road and turn right there to go around this, cutting easily along Swamp Road to Two Holes of Water Road. Turn right here, and continue on through this narrow, curving lane through beautiful and apparently undiscovered foliage. Brake for deer leaping across the road from east to west. Approaching Stephen Hand's Path I see a blinking red light on the dashboard. It's the engine light indicator. Call base. They will get back to me.

Try to negotiate a left, back onto Stephen Hands, after pleading to oncoming motorists in both directions to please let me in, finally give up, but then see if I gun it, I can sneak through and head down Long Lane. Pass Iacono Farm, EECO Farm and the high school, then zig-zag to quick left on Gould to Cedar Street (GPS resets and resets and resets) then ignoring lady's entreaties to go right at North Main see that a detour at Miller Lane is not necessary, pass the firehouse and make a left onto North Main Street. There's a melee of SUVs stopped in all directions in front of the North Main Street Cleaners but I find a way to thread through it and go left at the fork past Nick & Toni's onto Three Mile Harbor Road, past Round Swamp Farm and then to destination at 2:51 p.m., coming up the driveway to park. Operation success. Time frame almost perfect.

Debriefing done by Chris Wasserstein who is at the house. Gas level noted, water level noted, tire pressure checked, music off, GPS disabled—both of them—drink on the deck overlooking the harbor. Mission accomplished.

Chairman Trump: Let Him Win; Let Him Hire a President

ast week, after the killing of police officers ast week, after the killing of police officers in Dallas, our various public officials gave statements of regret, condolence and encouragement. Donald Trump, who is a presumptive government official, also issued one.

It doesn't read like he wrote it himself. On the other hand, both its points—the statement makes two-have errors in them.

In the first, he says this was "a coordinated, premeditated assault" on our police. The error is that the Police Chief of Dallas first announced that it seemed that it was, but later reported there was only a single shooter. Trump turned a belief into a fact.

In his second point he refers to "the senseless, tragic deaths of two people in Louisiana and Minnesota reminds us how much more needs to be done." He doesn't say, in spite of the video of both incidents, what needs to be done. Could be anything. Could be building a wall around African-Americans. Or the police.

This is a rather pitiful response in my opinion, and I think it speaks to the notion that Trump is good at winning but that's all. Yet winning is important.

Fact is, Trump is a terrific negotiator. He threatens, cajoles, works things out, gets the best deal. He is, as he says, "all about winning."

Trump's weakness is in running things. He hires people to run things. And if he doesn't like how they are running them, he fires them. Then tries somebody else.

TCSCONCIERGE.COM

Does he want the job, or just the power?

You never see Trump greeting people at a casino. You never see him backslapping customers at a resort. You never see him creating a kitchen recipe for a new chef. He wins. He licks his chops in delight and he moves on, leaving the pieces to be assembled and made to work by others.

I submit that in many ways, Trump is like a dog chasing a squirrel. He loves chasing it. And he loves catching it. But then when he catches it, he doesn't know what to do with it.

And this leads me to a suggestion. The other day, reporters, noticing Trump's enthusiasm for winning and his lack of any good ideas beyond that, asked if he were to win the Presidency, would he consider resigning. His response was interesting. He said he wouldn't rule out that possibility.

I think that if Trump should win, having won he should hire somebody to run the country. Let this person he hires be the President. Trump would be Chairman.

In many democracies, the office of the Presidency is a ceremonial post. Also elected is a Prime Minister. It is the Prime Minister who runs the country. But the President has the authority to fire the Prime Minister under certain circumstances and call for new elections.

Thus it would be that in the present instance in Dallas it would be the job of the Trumpappointed President to offer condolences and an intelligent explanation of what happened and how to prevent it in the future. Chairman Trump could smile benevolently at what the President has done.

For a long time now, I've thought that Trump, even if he didn't win, ought to be given the title of National Public Advocate, the person who at newspapers and other media outlets gets to tell the people running things what they are doing wrong.

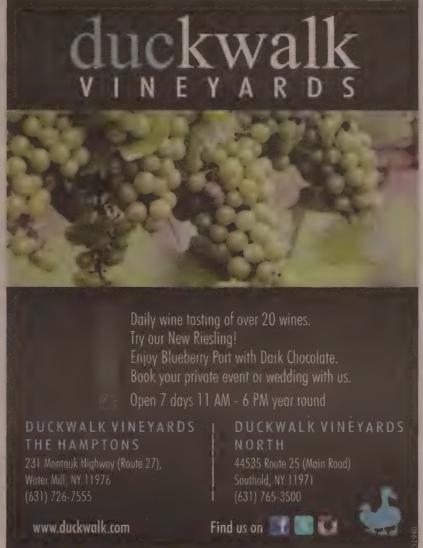

But if he wins the Presidency, I think he should kick himself up to Chairman and hire somebody else as President.

Thus, if the time comes when he wants to press the button to nuke a country he's mad at and heads for the button, he'll get waylaid by the President who will say "Stop, that's my job, and I'll take care of it." No nuke will be fired. And Trump will say, "What do you think about that guy, standing up to me? What a fella."

Have him choose somebody with the temperament to be President. Romney comes to mind, or Kasich or Jeb. Give Trump the right to fire him. He would love it, we'd all breathe easier, and overseas leaders would, too.

The Retreat Helps Put an End to Domestic Violence

BY CHRISTIE LEIGH BABIRAD

A portion of ticket proceeds from Dan's Taste of Two Forks (July 23) and Dan's ClambakeMTK at Gurney's Montauk (July 30) will go to benefit The Retreat, which provides safety, shelter and support for victims of domestic abuse and works to break the cycle of family violence.

The Retreat, established in 1987 in East Hampton, offers a variety of programs and services including in-school violence prevention education, a teen leadership program that addresses dating violence and bullying, a 24-hour bilingual crisis hotline, legal advocacy, financial management and job readiness services, and a Suffolk County Fatherhood Initiative. Stephanie House, The Retreat's shelter, is a safe space where victims of domestic violence can stay.

"There was a need for housing

"There was a need for housing for those in abusive relationships. When the shelter started, there was more awareness and people spoke out," says Loretta K. Davis, Executive Director of The Retreat. Lephanie House provides housing for 18 adults and children for 90 days. The Retreat helps with transportation and clothing, if needed, and also has counseling services and case managers for the residents. "All our services are free and confidential. We don't want anyone to be fearful to make the call," Davis says. The shelter is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

The Retreat also serves many non-residential people as well. "We love [Stephanie House], but what's important to know is that we're not just a shelter. We have counseling, advocacy, and we aid in mental health calls. We work with the police, and the police will give out our number. Last year we served 3,400 people," says Davis.

A newer program, the Suffolk County Fatherhood Initiative focuses on prevention. "The requirement is that none of these fathers have abused. We help them with parenting skills—something we all need—relationship skills and job placement." Davis explains that abuse often occurs due to stressors, such as lack of financial stability. The Fatherhood Initiative works to help men locate what triggers them, as well as prevent violence from happening in the first place. "We received a five-year grant from Another place where The Retreat helps create awareness of domestic violence is in schools. "We go into lower, middle and upper education programs in the schools, one is just as important as the other," Davis says.

The Retreat is successful due to the efforts of more than 150 volunteers, school involvement, grants, community leaders, fundraising events, private donations, and with financial help from The Retreat's thrift store in the Bridgehampton Commons. "We sell clothing and furniture to raise money for all that we do. It also helps our clients by providing clothing for them, if they need it." Dianne Reeves on Collaboration and Inspiration

S oulful jazz vocalist Dianne Reeves will appear at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center (WHBPAC) this Sunday, July 17. We couldn't be more excited to hear her exquisite voice as she performs classics, as well as songs off her most recent album Beautiful Life. Reeves discusses her love of collaborating with other musicians and reveals where she finds inspiration.

What do you love most about jazz?

It's a genre of music that really celebrates the uniqueness of a person. You must develop, refine and define your own voice. Whoever you listen to, however you've come to the music, whomever you're influenced by-at the end of the day, it's about how you say what it is you have to say.

What do you most hope for when people listen to your music?

That they feel it. That they go away not thinking of my voice as an instrument, but about what I'm saying and how I make them feel.

The great George Duke Songstress Dianne Reeves

was your cousin. Can you talk about his influence on vour music?

The thing I loved about George was how multi-faceted he was. First of all, he was an impeccable musician. At the same time he had this very strong collaborative spirit. It was the greatest thing to watch him do that, and for me to be in an environment like that really helped me to grow and have a broader color palette.

You sing with such intention, passion and soul. Where does your inspiration come from?

From life. Just living. One thing I've found in music is that the lyrics are extremely important, but also the melody and harmonies can really influence emotion. All these kinds of things play a part in the delivery of the song.

How do you choose the songs you perform?

I pick songs that I can feel, that I can sink my teeth into. Ones I can really interpret and that have a story behind them, even though the listener may not know what it is, they know that there's realness behind the song.

You said once, "At its essence, life is beautiful, and I wanted to celebrate that which is too often overlooked." This is evident in the music on Beautiful Life. What have you learned about life, music, resilience and overcoming difficult times?

Challenges make you strong. When you're confronted with a challenge, push through as hard as you can. You deal with emotions. You feel the emotions. Find a lesson in your current situation. The joys of life are to be treasured because they'll help you in those hard times. I've learned that miracles happen every single day, and that just being alive is a blessing. I believe challenges are the groundwork for wisdom.

In 2015, you won a Grammy for Best Jazz Vocal Album for Beautiful Life. How did the album come to be?

Collaboration. There are a lot of young musicians on my record that I was so inspired to work with. In their music, they recalled a period and a time in which I lived. They listened to the music [of that time], and the music was a part of them. It was an intergenerational experience.

What are you looking forward to about performing at WHBPAC?

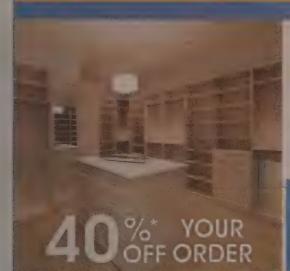

Making new friends—I always like that and what I love about my band is that we respond to each other in the moment. We invite the audience to be a part of that. I'm excited because there's always something new that comes out of the experience. I'm excited to be there.

Dianne Reeves performs at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, 76 Main Street, Westhampton, on July 17 at 8 p.m. For more info visit whbpac.org or call 631-288-1500

Cesar Millan Connects Dogs and Man at WHBPAC

BY OLIVER PETERSON

The Hamptons is in for a treat when the world's most recognized dog behaviorist, Cesar Millan, presents his live show at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center (WHBPAC) on Sunday, July 24.

Best known from his TV series Cesar 911 on Nat Geo WILD, Millan is a master of understanding dogs and using his insight and calm, assertive energy to tame even the most cantankerous canines. He incorporates this know-how into an entertaining and inspirational live show, which includes Millan's philosophies, methods and training secrets—not to mention lots of laughs.

As an added bit of excitement, his onstage subjects will comprise a selection of local shelter dogs handpicked by Millan that day. Each of them can be adopted after the event.

Millan recenty took some time to chat about his upcoming WHBPAC appearance.

What can people expect at the live show?

I like to have that one-on-one audience interaction. I want people to see the transformation live versus seeing it on TV. Once you see me working with a dog live, you really become a believer.

We call them man's best friend, so how did the dog become a menace to society? How do these dogs become unstable? That's my focus, and having the opportunity to do it live really makes more sense to people than them watching it on TV, reading the books, hearing the audio tapes. It just brings all the perspective to light and everybody leaves excited, enthusiastic and clear. I make sure people know we don't have problems with dogs—we have problems with humans not being properly educated.

You're very funny and engaging during shows. Did being an entertainer come naturally?

It's actually very natural to me. I grew up with a different type of comedy in Mexico. When you grow up poor, you look a lot to comedy—that's the only thing that can numb your sadness and your hunger. Growing up I watched comedy, and then performed it to my grandparents. That was the preparation for what I do now.

How will you choose which shelter dogs to include in the show?

For live experiences we don't bring high [intensity animals]. I bring dogs that have this mild, but obviously unwanted behavior, and then I change it just by the way I approach them, by the energy that I share.

Are you still learning about dogs?

I'm learning humans. A dog is a dog, no matter where you go in the world. Dogs develop the same issues—fear, aggression, insecurity, anxiety, hyperactivity, and they're very obvious and they're very honest. Humans hide behind problems. That's why I say I train people and rehabilitate dogs. If you take away the human, the owner, I can easily rehabilitate a dog, but the moment you bring the owner back, the dog changes its behavior. To me a dog is a teacher, not a student.

Art Legend Reynold Ruffins Takes Ashawagh Hall

BY VALERIE SAN FILIPPO

on't tell his other paintings, but Artist Reynold Ruffins has a favorite. "It's like asking which of your children you like the most," he said, sitting among colorful canvases in his studio in Sag Harbor. "I do have a favorite, but I wouldn't say which in front of the others!"

Ruffins work is a vibrant merging of shape and color, where the subject of the painting is less important than the impression one receives from it. "Almost none of my paintings have figures," Ruffins explains. "Some are based on local things... Most of my work is acrylic on canvas or paper. I often use oil pastels over the acrylic. They give a different surface texture."

Some of his work is clear in what it shows; a bouquet of flowers broken into sharp geometrics, or a summer picnic as if seen through a cracked lens. Some, like his Adam and Eve series, take a traditional narrative and reduce the story to its purest visual form. Others are more mysterious. It's in his faceless works that Ruffins plays with the ideas he's always loved in art. "I'm interested more in shape than I am in design and content. Rather than using the painting to tell a story, my interest is using the shape and color to hold interest. It's just the opposite of the first 50 years of my life as an illustrator, when telling a story was the first thing I considered."

Reynold Ruffins's 2016 Dan's Papers cover

When asked if he would ever consider returning to his successful career in illustration, Ruffins laughed and responded "No way! It scares the bejesus out of me! I don't want to be guided by another person's needs like that. I've been very fortunate in my life as an illustrator for the most part, doing work I enjoyed as well as satisfying the client... But being an artist is particularly satisfying now... [I like] the excitement of an idea and the challenge of pursuing it, and the highlighted appreciation of almost anything I see."

On Tuesday and Wednesday, July 19 and 20, Ruffins and five others artists will display their work in an exhibit at Ashawagh Hall in Springs. Ruffins coordinated the exhibit to include many artists he has come to admire, including his own daughter, Lynn Ruffins Cave, who creates intricate beadworks.

"I think Lynn has enormous talent, especially as a designer," says Ruffins. "She has a designer's eye and a great eye for color... She loves beads. She has in her studio about a quadrillion beads. Once involved in a work she just keeps going. She works late into the night. And she does it for the pleasure, for the enjoyment of doing it."

"As a matter of fact, originally I thought [the exhibit] might be just the two of us," Ruffins explains. "But of course in a hall that size it wasn't possible ... I like Ashawagh Hall and I wanted to use the opportunity to do it on my own and with people who were worthy of having a show. Ashawagh Hall has a history.

Jackson Pollock and abstract expressionists, not that our work reflects theirs, but it's just a very comfortable viewing space. All of us have different approaches and styles but they won't overlap or clash. They might even complement each other."

Alongside Reynold Ruffins and Lynn Ruffins Cave the Ashawagh Hall exhibit will feature the works of potter Beverly Granger as well as painters Nancy Brandon, Judith Henriques-Adams and Ann Tanksley.

The exhibit will be on display July 19 and 20 at Ashawagh Hall, 780 Springs Fireplace Road, East Hampton. The reception will be held on Tuesday, 7/19 at 5 p.m. at which time the artists will be present to discuss their works.

This Week's Cover Artist: Doug Reina

BY STEPHANIE HOLMES

This week's cover, "Beach Party," 2015 is an oil on canvas by Doug Reina, marking his sixth Dan's Papers cover. "Beach Party" captures an idyllic summer scene—a fleeting moment in time, sunlight cast upon the faces of the group enjoying a barbecue on the sand—offering a reminder to savor the height of the season here on the East End. Reina works out of his studio in Setauket, where he also offers painting classes. There's almost a nostalgic quality to this painting. Is that a typical element of your work?

While it's true that I'm attracted to older things that have some character, and this group certainly has that, I think what I'm really interested in are the off-beat scenarios that relate somehow to what I'm feeling in my life. I sometimes think that most of my paintings, at least the ones that have some weight to them, are really just self-portraits.

As I look at this cover painting, what I tune into is that everyone in the group is having a fine time except the fellow in the white shirt. His mind is elsewhere and that creates a subtle tension for me that I find interesting. I like it when a painting makes me start to wonder, what's going on here? I also like it when a painting shares a quiet, truthful moment that we all can feel.

Do you paint from models or from imagination?

Normally I prefer to paint from life. However, the models for this panting came from an old book ,called How to Make Good Movies, published by the Eastman Kodak Company.

What's your background in art?

I grew up in a family of artists, where I was constantly drawing funny pictures. I had some fine art classes in college. After that I tried my hand at cartooning and sold some work to King Features Syndicate as well as The New Yorker and other publications. Around 1995, I got into painting and for the next several, exciting years, spent most of my time painting landscapes on location. Of all the teachers I've ever had, painting from nature was where I learned the most. In 2006 I left my corporate day job and began painting full time. In 2014, I received a Pollock-Krasner grant, which enabled me to open my studio in Setauket. This was a wonderful opportunity for me and I'm very grateful to the Pollock-Krasner Foundation. I had a nice career moment recently as I exhibited in ArtHamptons this year for the first time. In addition to exhibiting and selling my work, I also teach painting out of my studio and also at the Art League of Long Island in Dix Hills.

How would you describe the art scene on the East End?

The East End art scene is in a sacred, creative land, filled with the ghosts of great artists who shaped the direction of art history. It's also chock full of very talented living artists, whose work I find both exciting and fresh.

There's also a creative community on the East End that I really enjoy. Making art in my studio is a solitary experience. When I need a break, I find spending time with other artists who understand what life is like as a creative professional to be really nice. I've made some wonderful friends with artists from the East End.

Who are some of your favorite artists or sources of inspiration?

Edward Hopper, Richard Diebenkorn, Fairfield Porter to just name a few. As for a contemporary artist, lately I've been looking at Enrique Martinez Celaya, as I'm curious about his creative thinking when it comes to making paintings. I also want to mention a really nice podcast that I listen to quite frequently called The Savvy Painter. Lots of interviews with talented artists.

The Beauty and Variety of a Personal Garden

BY JEANELLE MYERS

My garden is comprised of plants that interest me. Somehow, I've been able to put together everythingvegetables, flowers, leafy plants—in a way that works. Gardens that are very personal statements are my favorites. I like to see evidence of the individual who created the garden, and keeps creating it.

I plant and maintain three vegetable gardens. In the height of summer, it seems like the plants triple in size during the week. In the past, I haven't grown a vegetable garden for myself, but this year I planted green beans, potatoes and tomatoes. One of my coworkers planted cucumbers for himself (and me).

Now, I realize I should have planted veggies in the past as I enjoy having them in my own garden. I don't have the best soil, the sun isn't very plentiful and my watering schedule isn't consistent. But despite these harsh conditions the plants still produce! They're indomitable.

If you don't have a vegetable garden, you can still grow tasty veggies amongst your flowers or in pots. One of those big tomato plants would look beautiful next to some colorful blooms. I would be brave and plant beans from seeds. What have you got to lose? Beans grow as either bushes or vines. I prefer vines: they produce until the first frost.

New beans keep coming as long as the vine is alive. Bush beans provide several pickings, but are best when new seeds are planted about every three weeks. I like to see structures in my garden, so I build bamboo teepees for the bean vines to wind around. The garden centers still have some vegetable plants, but hurrythey'll all be snapped up soon.

In mid-August I'll plant seeds for a fall crop of kale, carrots and beets. If I didn't have a "real" vegetable garden at home, I'd make sure to find space in my flower garden for a few seeds. If you do this, you might be inspired to make a small plot next year!

The lotus plant in a large plastic pot next to my small pond is Bamboo teepees lend form in the garden finally sending up leaves, and I await its yearly bloom. I've had this plant for at least 11 years—in the same pot, in the same location. I don't do anything for it except water it when I add water to the pond. The lotus produces only one flower per year, but some of my neighbors come over to see the bloom. The bud takes about one week to develop and the flower lasts three days. The whole process is magical, I think.

I'm not the best gardener at my own house—the shoemaker's children, as the expression goes-but the plots I tend at my home are certainly examples of my sense of gardening beauty, growing and maintenance philosophy, and a place to experiment with design and individual plant varieties.

I don't have much of a lawn, but the spaces between my various garden beds are now ablaze with Lychnis coronaria (rose campion). with its magenta flowers above gray foliage. The rose campion is accented by the small, daisy-like flowers of tansies I planted in the same area, and purple verbena that regrew from last year. There's also the even darker purple of a Red Dragon contorted hazel plant that contrasts nicely with an assortment of low plants with variegated (two tone) leaves. In the back, I'm "experimenting" with a patch of red heuchera (another foliage-focused plant, this one with bright red leaves as the name would suggest) and the addition of three orange roses that I just had to have. They definitely make for a very personal "garden statement" that, I think, surprises passersby!

MONTAUK DELIGHTS

So much to see and eat this weekend!

MONTAUK

THE END Fishing and drinking are near.

The Perfect Beach Break: Lunch at Sloppy Tuna

BY EMILY SMITH GILBERT

uch has been made of how chaotic Montauk can be during the summer months. Groups have been formed. Meetings held. Opinions opined. Well, add another opinion to the mix: the Sloppy Tuna is a great, low-key place to grab lunch and enjoy the sunshine

One of the first things you'll notice is that the hashtag #respectmentauk is emblazoned on everything from menus to the backs of T-shirts, and for good reason. The Sloppy Tuna has turned a corner. On a pre-4th of July Monday, the crowd was a mix of young, old and families enjoying the sunny day. Good cheer abounded.

If you're lucky enough to grab a seat on the upper deck, decorated with potted palms for a "tropical feel," you'll be treated to views of the ocean and beach-goers frolicking in the sand and waves. It's a great place for people watching. Even if you're under the roof of the "inside" dining room, it's completely open between the outside and interior spaces. Bar tables for two are lined up next to large windows that open wide to the dunes below.

The vibe is casual—no muss, no fuss. Classic rock plays over the speakers. Tables are simply set with neatly wrapped silverware and the waitstaff are smartly dressed in the aforementioned T-shirts (#respectmontauk). There's a refreshing lack of pretention: all are welcome. Order a cocktail, because it's time to relax.

Speaking of, the Deadliest Catch (billed as Sloppy Tuna's "secret signature rum punch") is made from four types of rum and three juices. It's hard to go wrong with a mix of coconut, pineapple and whatever the secret ingredients are. The drink is delicious, not overpoweringly sweet and with just the right amount of tartness to balance all the flavors. Other enticingly named drinks are the Sloppy Poppy (a Bloody Mary), the Sloppy Brazilian (acai vodka and lemonade) and the Tunarita (the Sloppy version of a margarita)...are you sensing a theme?

But what about the food? For a starter you might consider the Arugula Salad, tossed with fresh strawberries, goat cheese and shaved red onion, with a red wine vinaigrette. The ratio of dressing to roughage is perfect, and the creaminess of the cheese pairs well with the strawberries and red onion. An unusual combination, but one that works.

The bartender was overheard recommending the tuna wrap (a full tuna steak, not tuna salad) to a young woman. Fish does seem like an appropriate choice, given the proximity of the ocean.

Absolutely get the Baja Fish Tacos. The fish is ahi tuna, lightly battered and fried to perfection: neither too greasy nor dry, but crispy, with just the right amount of salt. Two soft tacos come with the order, arranged in one of those nifty metal taco-holders. Diced tomatoes, shredded cabbage and sriracha sour cream round out the fillings. Squeeze some lime over the top and you're ready to dig in! At first glance, the enormous tacos seem like an impossible feat, but the fish is so light that if you come to the table hungry, you can handily finish them—though it's doubtful you'll have room for dessert.

Other menu items that tempt are the Beer Battered Clam Strips and the Asian Grilled Tuna Salad (mixed greens, crispy wontons and miso dressing). And let's not forget the Lobster Mac and Cheese, a masterpiece of buttery lobster and cheesy pasta.

Wash it all down with a domestic or imported beer from a list that includes Red Strip and Montauk Summer Ale. Or, go for a bottle of rosé, as one young couple did...during lunch...on a Monday! Summer really must be here.

Don't Miss the Ballyhoo at Bay Street Theater

BY LEE MEYER

or most of the characters in Bay Street Theater's The Last Night of Ballyhoo by Alfred Uhry, Judaism is less a faith than a given circumstancethey were born that way, so it's best to just address it and move on. A romantic comedy set in Atlanta, Georgia in December, 1939 in the home of the well-to-do German Jewish Levy/Freitag family, The Last Night of Ballyhoo often feels like a sweet trifle from a more innocent time—until the colorful characters are forced to face uneasy truths about faith, social standing and class.

Boo Levy (Ellen Harvey), a widow who lives with her brother Adolph Freitag (John Hickok) and widowed sister-in-law Reba Freitag (Dori Legg), is desperate to find a suitable gentleman to take her starry-eyed daughter Lala (Erin Neufer) to the Ballyhoo, the biggest festival of the year at their Jewish country club. Lala, constantly at odds with her harsh mother, has lived at home for years since dropping out of college after a vague incident and would rather talk about more important things, like the Gone with the Wind movie premiere. Adolph's new assistant,

A scene from "The Last Night of Ballyhoo"

Brooklyn transplant Joe Farkas (Ari Brand), meets and falls head over heels for Reba's intellectual and beautiful daughter Sunny (Amanda Kristin Nichols), while Boo scrambles to snag wealthy Louisiana boy

Peachy Weil (Daniel Abeles) as Lala's date.

The wonder of Ballyhoo is how fresh it feels, despite the liberal use of familiar tropes and conventions. Lala is jealous of the more secure, stable Sunny, but their sibling-like argument takes a serious turn when Lala cries about "looking" more Jewish than her blonde cousin. Boo doesn't approve of the lessrefined Joe, but it's not his lack of Southern manners; it's his pride in growing up in a traditional Jewish household. The undercurrent of self-hate and shame gives Ballyhoo a modern relevance that intentionally conflicts with the Technicolor story unfolding on stage, and the play is all the more memorable for it.

The performances are strong across the board. As Boo, Harvey is both infuriating and extremely sympathetic. You'll wince at some of the things Boo says—her use of one particular derogatory term will surprise you—but Harvey's layered performance will make sure you understand where she's coming from. Neufer is a delight as Lala, a dreamer who would rather fantasize than actually go out and make a life for herself.

And Abeles, with a deep Southern drawl, is downright charming as the smarmy but oddly endearing Peachy, giving the character an ironic, self-aware ignorance—Peachy may say rude things and revel in his old money, but there's a sense that he knows how he comes across and is completely okay with it. As the fish-out-of-water Joe, Brand nails the "nice Jewish boy;" plenty of people are going to wish they had a Joe to set up with their kids.

Directed with a playful touch by Will Pomerantz, the production of Ballyhoo is as charming as its characters. Alexander Dodge's set, which at first appears to be a traditional single interior, has a surprise or two that adds spectacle to the proceedings. The production design nails the period, be it sound designer Jane Shaw's clever use of music or the lovely costumes by Lindsay W. Davis.

It's easy to predict a happy ending in The Last Night of Ballyhoo, which is all too rare for a play about religious issues, but Uhry is careful to remind the audience that just because the central conflicts are resolved, things may not always be smooth sailing. An exchange late in the play between Adolph and Boo in which the siblings discuss how different they thought their lives would be is a poignant moment. And the final scene, which won't be spoiled here, is quietly powerful and very satisfying.

The Last Night of Ballyhoo runs through July 24 at Bay Street Theater and Sag Harbor Center for the Arts. For tickets and more information, call 631-725-9500 and visit baystreet.org.

You Know You Want to Read It While It's Hot

BY STACY DERMONT

Long Island author Aristodemos Pavlou is better known as "Chef Arie" to many. Few would guess that this accomplished culinarian had a trilogy of romance novels up his sleeve. But while reading The Congressman's Wife (Red Sky Presents New York, 2016), much is revealed about this complex man.

Perhaps Pavlou is a "romantic" in the classical sense that he rejects established norms and conventions. Just this month he opened his own restaurant, Bistro Été, in the his finely tuned cooking skills hew to the traditional French and Mediterranean cuisines. The mastery he brings to his work is often what sets it apart.

Why was Pavlou moved to write these books? He says, "I have so many great stories!" Quite a few strands of a rich life are tied up in this first book in the series. And the Veuve Clicquot flows like water...One might wonder if a passage like "He knew the first time he'd looked into her eyes that she was for him, that somehow she would complete him, like he'd get back a part of him he hadn't even known was missing," could have been inspired by his relationship with his wife Liz, whom he married in February.

This novel is the best kind of summer mind-candy. Take it to the beach, leave it on the bedside table in a guestroom, read it in stalled traffic-it's a gift that romance novel, but its author refers to it as a "loveaction book." He's not that familiar with the romance novel genre. He's working from primal instincts. It's unusual for the central character of a romance novel to be a man.

More unusual still for a manly-man to write a romance novel. It's an interesting take.

If you're a woman reading this book, you will have questions. How has the love interest, an intelligent woman in the 21st century, put up with her no-good husband for so long? How did she get herself so stuck in such a loveless marriage? Frankly, does what the lovers did in that plane's bathroom really qualify them to be card-carrying members of the Mile High Club? And what's with the confusion over how to Google something? Can any woman, even a tall blonde named Eden Bancroft, be so very flawless?

You may not find answers to these questions in the book, but you will find many fun East End references and characters. Fishing at Plum Gut, docking in Sag Harbor, appearing on News 12. Though sometimes bordering on stereotypes, the characters are a lot like people you know out here. The power-hungry, cheating politician, his overbearing old-money mother, the wealthy but damaged kids. It's a heady mix of Hamptons highs and lows.

Does a romance novel strike you as a frivolous read? Absolutely! But if you need a little motivation for attending yet another white-tent party, try page 61: "So Eden put on yet another designer gown they couldn't afford and went to Joe Endicott's dinner party. And because she went, her life changed irrevocably and forever...It had to be destiny.

Too refined to read a romance novel, even on vacation? Get your copy online today because as Pavlou writes, "You need to stop fighting this. It's bigger than both of us."

One central mystery remains: where did Pavlou find the inspiration for the main character, Kaleb Stavros? Who is this young, sexy Greek-American, motorcycle-riding chef whose "every movement in the kitchen is fluid and graceful?" To be continued.

SHOP 'TIL YOU DROP Where to find the bargains this weekend.

GOODIES For you, family and friends.

Sun, Shop, Save, Savor in the Hamptons

BY VALERIE SAN FILIPPO

High season is upon us, and with every event you must be asking yourself, what am I going to wear? And where to store all of those new pieces? With new parties happening every weekend, it can be hard to keep up. That's why Armarium is a great resource for any socialite this summer. Download the app and scroll through the gorgeous styles, select what you like and choose the size. You can even speak with a stylist or book a fitting to make sure everything is perfect. Then the items you've selected arrive, and are yours for four days. You can extend the rental period if you need to. After that, just send the dress back! They handle the packaging, the return label, even the dry cleaning. You have a fresh new look and no more cluttered closets. From July 22-31 Baron's Cove in Sag Harbor will be hosting an Armarium pop-up shop, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily. Baron's Cove is located at 31 West Water Street in Sag Harbor. Call 844-227-6672 for venue information. Find the Armarium at the app store or at armarium.com.

Fleeps. You've heard of them, right? You've seen them in the Hamptons. They're those brightly colored, strappy sandals. Very fashion-forward. The website tells us they're handmade by women in Costa Rica, and they're sustainable! 10% of profits go to the FLEEPS Foundation, with a goal of sending 10,000 impoverished girls to school by 2019. But you want to know what they feel like. They feel lighter than a foam flip-flop. The toe strap extends over your four minor toes, rather than your big toe. So the pressure's off—but the nifty ankle strap ensures that they stay ON. Fleeps are available for purchase at the Surf Lodge in Montauk and from fleeps.com.

Are you looking for better makeup options? Head to Bluemercury, the makeup and skincare store at 67 Main Street in East Hampton. They've got the latest in skincare treatments, from Laura Mercier Face Illuminator to La Mer's limited edition World Oceans Day Moisturizing Cream. Heading to the beach for some fun in the sun? You'll want to make sure your skin is protected. They've got sun protection and after sun care, from Clinique Mineral

Sunscreen to Hampton Sun After Sun Moisturizer. They also offer a great selection of fragrances. Call 631-324-0330 or visit bluemercury.com to find out

Guys, do you need a fun and flattering swimwear option for the season? Look no further than Orlebar Brown. The brand has everything you need to look good for the summer, from resort shorts to polos, but really shines in the swim trunks department. Nautical photographic fabrics make each pair of shorts a work of art. Some are deceptive: From a distance the Fauna Parakeets Swim Short appears to be a stylish pattern of palm fronds. but up close the fabric is actually a photograph of green parakeets. High quality and with a unique tailored fit, they're a must-have for any beach day. Find Orlebar Brown at 55 Newtown Lane, East Hampton. Call 631-324-3960 or visit orlebarbrown. com for more information.

the sun during these hours, use

Besides avoiding the sun in general, if you've had any surgery, or any inflammation of the skin, you want to avoid the sun. The reason for this is that inflammation—from trauma or plastic surgery—can stimulate your pigment cells. If you're exposed to the sun and you have stimulated Be safe in the sun. pigment cells, you can be at risk for post-inflammatory hyperpigmentation.

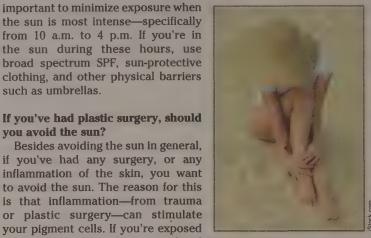

Therefore, I recommend wearing sunscreen, a hat and sunglasses to minimize potential damage.

You want something with both UVA and UVB protection. The simplest thing to look for is a sunscreen that contains zinc oxide. Today's formulations are not the thick pasty creams of the past. You can still get the same great full-spectrum protection without leaving a white film on your skin.

What are some common mistakes made when applying sunscreen?

The two biggest mistakes are not putting enough on and not reapplying frequently enough. You should be putting on suntan lotion 20 minutes before exposure as well.

What suncare products do you use?

I prefer one called DNA Damage Control because it has DNA repair enzymes along with the zinc oxide. It's the only sunscreen I sell in

If you have sensitive skin, what sunscreen do you recommend?

Again, the zinc oxide formulations are what you need. Besides offering the best full-spectrum coverage, these lotions tend to soothe sensitive skin. Zinc oxide is also good for acneprone skin.

What should you wear sun protection?

A hat is a great idea. The number one site for skin cancer is the nose, so if you can keep that physically protected you're off to a good start! There've been advances in stylish clothes that also offer UV protection and still provide excellent athletic functionality. Sunglasses are, of course, the key for protecting the eyes and the delicate skin of the eyelids.

What's new in sun safety?

The most exciting thing is that, over the past few years, the FDA has approved several drugs for Melanoma that actually prolong survival. The key is still prevention and early detection, but at least there are now some options even for those with advanced Melanoma. Everyone should see a dermatologist at least once a year and perform selfchecks as well.

Navy Beach Chef Franklin Ferguson

BY STACY DERMONT

an's Taste of Two Forks presented by Farrell Building Company returns Saturday, July 23, but to a new Bridgehampton location—the waterfront at Fairview Farm at Mecox. Chef Franklin Ferguson from Montauk's Navy Beach will be there. He might have a hard time choosing what to serve. As he says, "This season we have some really great new twists on the menu; each season we have a different ceviche prep, and some variation on a seafood stew: The Montauk Fluke Ceviche or the Catalan Suquet. In this year's ceviche we're using local fluke together with pickled cauliflower, baby carrots and white onions that we make in-house, with fresh lemon and hot peppers. Last year we had a Brazilian Moqueca on the menu, whereas this year we've introduced a Suguet, which is a saffron and cava based Catalan fish stew that we are making with monkfish, squid, shrimp, clams, mussels and almonds. We hope it's

What fuels your creativity as a chef?

At Navy Beach we work as a team to create each season's menu. Every year the menu is seafood centric, with about 15 new items or preparations. In the off season we all travel and draw a lot of inspiration from those experiences. Traveling and exploring to find new foods and learning about different cooking methods is a passion for all of us.

What do you think of the Montauk Fishburger?

We're huge Dock to Dish fans over here. It's great that they've created so much awareness about local and sustainable seafood. We're also friends of Eric and Sandra Ripert. We hope that what Eric has created with Dock to Dish and Dan Barber and the other initiative participants will lead to even more awareness about sustainable food and help create a plan for a healthier future for the school system in this area, and, eventually, nationwide.

How have eating trends affected your menu?

We've definitely made an effort to add healthier items to our menu to cater to those with dietary restrictions and guests looking for healthier options. We've kept comfort food house favorites like the Buttermilk Fried Chicken, Crispy Calamari Salad and Navy Burger on the menu, but added new salads and lighter entrées each season. This year we have a new gluten-free salad, a butter lettuce and baby spinach salad with pumpkin seeds, feta, Medjool dates and radish, as well as other items that are gluten-free like a grilled artichoke; sautéed local skate with frisée, red onion, basil and an orange emulsion; seared Atlantic salmon with asparagus, pea shoots and fava beans.

It's great to get to see other restaurants and chefs and connect at the event. If we're able to step away from the table to take a peek at what some other restaurants are producing, that's a nice plus.

Dan's Taste of Summer kicks off with Dan's GrillHampton on Friday, July 22, and continues on Saturday, July 23, with Dan's Taste of Two Forks presented by Farrell Building Company, both on the waterfront at Fairview Farm at Mecox, 19 Horsemill Lane, Bridgehampton. New to the lineup this year is the oceanfront food and drink fest ClambakeMTK at Gurney's Montauk, 290 Old Montauk Highway in Montauk on July 30. Dan's Harvest East End, the can't-miss food and wine classic, rounds out the series on August 20 at McCall Vineyard and Ranch, 22600 Main Road, Cutchogue. I North Steakhouse's Chef

BY STACY DERMONT

North Steakhouse's chef Christopher Cariello will be heating things up at GrillHampton on July 22 at Fairview Farm in Bridgehampton. Top chefs will take sides as Team Hamptons competes against Team NYC in a one-of-a-kind cooking competition and tasting event. Enjoy the expertly grilled fare, beer and specialty cocktails, then be part of the action as you, and a judging panel of A-list palates, cast votes for the finest food of the night.

As Cariello says, "Cooking is my salvation. It's what gets me out of bed every morning. I really enjoy the camaraderie and feeling of working with great East End chefs! It's very humbling."

What fuels your creativity as a chef?

Everything around me. Local availability of ingredients, music, my mood, my surroundings.

What's your favorite "off-cut" of meat? Sweetbreads and liver

What's your local beverage of choice this season? Crooked Ladder Brewing Company's Summeritis

Which of your dishes would you most serve to another chef?

Any and all of them.

Please complete this sentence:
I most feel like a well-fed caveman when I devour a 30 oz. tomahawk ribeye at 1 North Steakhouse!

I could survive on a desert island

if I just had: Red Bull, coffee and peanut butter.

Who's going to win the competition this year?

Hamptons! We have more heart!

Dan's Taste of Summer kicks off with Dan's GrillHampton hosted by Adam Richman on Friday, July 22, and continues on Saturday, July 23, with Dan's Taste of Two Forks presented by Farrell Building Company hosted by Alex Guarnaschelli, both on the waterfront at Fairview Farm at Mecox in Bridgehampton. The oceanfront food and drink fest ClambakeMTK at Gurney's Montauk, hosted by Marc Murphy and Eden Grinshpan, premieres on Saturday, July 30. Dan's Harvest East End, the can't-miss food and wine classic, hosted by Geoffrey Zakarian is Saturday, August 20, at McCall Vineyard and Ranch in Cutchogue. Architectural Beauties on the Hamptons Market

Chef Christopher Cariell

BY OLIVER PETERSON

he Hamptons real estate market is bearing some fine architectural fruit this week—as one Bates Masi home falls from the tree in Amagansett, another sprouts up in the very same hamlet, and the legacy of Norman Jaffe shows itself with two listings in Southampton Town.

Bates Masi's Tiny Hamptons Treasure in Contract

The Hamptons' coolest little house is finally in contract after sitting on the market for more than two years. With just 600 square feet of living space on an incredible .28 acres, this Bates Masi + Architects designed gem in Amagansett's Dune Hampton was always going to need a special buyer, and Sotheby's International Realty Associate Broker Rylan Jacka appears to have found one. Originally listed by Corcoran Group for $1,795,000 in March of 2014, the home's most recent price was down to $1,475,000.

The house has 2 bedrooms, 1.5 baths and is located just 200 feet from the beach at 9 Ocean Lane. Its unique two-story design features floor-to-ceiling walls of glass and a skylight, inviting sunlight to stream in throughout the summer days.

It's proof that buyers paying over $1 million don't always need a McMansion to satisfy their seaside desires!

New Bates Masi Hits the Market

In related news, Sotheby's has also put another, significantly larger, Bates Masi home on the market at 76 Oak Lane in Amagansett Village. Listed by Eve Combemale and Marilyn Clark for $3,695,000, the 4,200-square-foot Modern has 5 bedrooms and 5.5 baths, and a living room lined with walls of glass. The home also features a gourmet kitchen, two separate offices, a cozy den and a second-floor master suite with floor-to-ceiling windows and doors, a spacious bath. The property also includes a light-filled, 600-square-foot studio and attached garage, which is quite big enough to be a home all its own.

Two Norman Jaffe Contemporaries for Sale

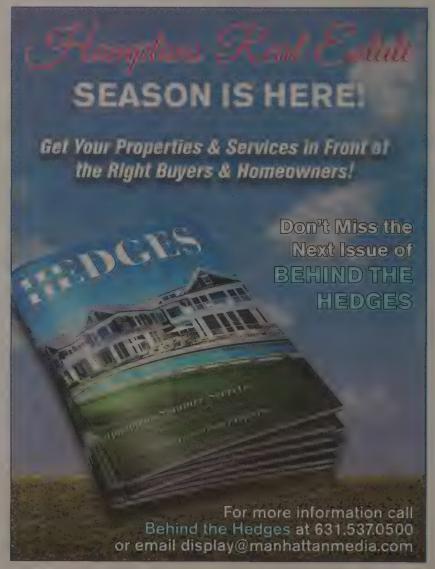

Speaking of brilliant architects, Corcoran Group currently has two Contemporary homes designed by the late, great Norman Jaffe on the market in Southampton and Water Mill.

Listed for $3,995,000, the Water Mill residence is a first-time offering that features 4 bedrooms, 3 bathrooms and 3,500 square feet of living space on just shy of an acre. The home, built in 1981, is bordered on two sides by reserve, and offers stunning gardens and a pool and spa set in sandstone.

The grander Southampton Jaffe was built in 1979 and offers 5 bedrooms, 6 baths and 6,000 square feet for $26 million. On 2.39 acres, the home has a unique shape and sensational oceanfront views. Sound and sturdy, the house is built with California redwood, Westchester granite, white oak and walls of glass. It features fabulous patios, walkways and decking, and nearly 200 feet of secure steel bulkhead frontage on what's considered one of the best beaches in the world.
